is a software solution designed to make drive cleaning and scanning a breeze, providing a bunch of useful tools along with a user friendly interface. Since we're pretty much used with today's maintenance programs that bundle loads of features, expectations are quite high. Well, DrvCareXP isn't quite impressive as it is more like a simple interface that gives you quick access to a number of Windows utilities, including disk cleanup, defragmentation and scan disk. Although it looks indeed very user friendly and straightforward when first seeing the app, extra care is recommended when using it. First of all, keep in mind that enabling the scan disk and hitting the run button will reboot your computer without prior notice, so don't forget to save your work before opening the app. Disk Cleanup is nothing more than the standard utility included in Windows. Probably the only good thing inside the app is the fact that it comes with a tool to schedule operations. Also, in case you get yourself into some sort of trouble using this application, you can also turn to the comprehensive help manual that's included in the package. There is a rather interesting feature to be found in DrvCareXP, namely the one that allows you to use a third-party utility for defragmenting the system. To activate it, simply check the box near 'Use My Defragger'. Of course, DrvCareXP works smooth and fast, but don't expect revolutionary results, as the only improvements are actually the ones made by the tools built in Windows. All things considered, its safe to say that this software works as good as the dedicated programs that come by default with your operating system. The scheduling

Keymacro is a sound keylogger. It logs all the audio keys you are pressed with and records them as sound clips. It is very easy to use. You can view the recordings you get from the Keymacro through the Keymacro "Recorders" application. You can also listen to the clips recorded by Keymacro through the "Audiospecter" application. Keymacro is the first application of its kind, which records audio keys instead of text. Some other audio keyloggers recorded text in plain text, some had a GUI, but we never had anything as easy to use and powerful as this. You can also change Keymacro's settings and modify it to your liking. Keymacro is able to save up to 2.5 hours of audio recordings on each keystroke. You can select the duration of the recording from 10 seconds up to 2.5 hours. The settings dialog will show you how many seconds are recorded, how many times a button has been pressed, how many keystrokes have been performed, how many passwords have been typed etc. Keymacro can also start from an open window and start recording. You can also use Keymacro as a file recorder. Using the Keymacro applications, you can use the audio recording with the following applications: - Any text editor - Any music player - The popular screen recorders, such as ShowRec - Any media player, as they usually record audio, including TV, radio, etc. - Audiospecter, which is also a very useful application, as it allows you to listen to your audio recordings with different settings. Keymacro supports the following audio features: - Any standard sound card or sound card software - Any audio file - Any audio file with any audio settings, such as WAV, OGG, MP3, WMA, AAC, etc. - Any audio file with any audio settings and codecs (MP3) Keymacro's unique feature is the fact that it uses "language blocks", which means that no matter how you type, the keystrokes you make are converted into a particular language. For example, if you want to use English, just type "a" and "i". If you want to use Arabic, type "ء" and "إ". If you want to use French, type "a" and "e". The settings window can be seen in the 81e310abbf
