The Bank of England said that household borrowing fell for the first time in five years, while personal lending to businesses contracted for the first time in four years. The drop followed a rise in borrowing at the end of 2017, when lenders refinanced debts as economic growth appeared to be picking up. The Bank of England said on Friday that borrowing among households and businesses in Britain had contracted in the three months to March, which was the first such fall in five years, as loans to businesses plunged by £9bn and loans to households tumbled £1.2bn. The Bank had raised its forecasts for growth in both the UK and the eurozone in March but economic growth appeared to be slowing down in April, causing the Bank to cut its growth forecast for this year and next. Consumer spending falls, while businesses are investing less, have caused the Bank of England to rethink its forecasts for rising inflation, which had been predicted at 2.5% this year and 2.9% in 2019. Andrew Sentance, of the Office for Budget Responsibility, said there was "evidence of softer spending behaviour among households, rather than increased savings, causing the decline in the growth of consumer debt". In a report that laid bare the pressures facing the chancellor, Philip Hammond, the watchdog said that the UK economy was expected to expand by 1.3% this year and 1.6% in 2019, with growth having slowed to 3.1% in the first quarter from 4% in the final three months of
