Asthma is a condition in which people have more than normal inflammation of their airway, making breathing more difficult. The condition can affect your whole life. You may feel short of breath, wheeze and cough. You may have a runny or blocked nose. Your child may have skin rashes or fever. What causes asthma? The reasons why people get asthma are not known. Some people have an inherited tendency to develop asthma. However, the majority of children who get asthma do not have a family member who has asthma. So something else must be causing the condition. Risk factors for asthma People who have factors that increase their chances of getting asthma include: being allergic to a substance, such as pollen, pets or foods having a parent or sibling with asthma being of a child age group, or having certain other illnesses, such as bronchiolitis and eczema, that make you more likely to develop asthma Having a close family member who has had asthma Having a sickle cell gene Having a relative with cystic fibrosis
